

Customer Support Knowledge Base

For LangChain + Streamlit AI Agent Demo

Adapted as a training and demo knowledge document from Amazon.in customer service help topics, including Conditions of Use and related support topics for orders, returns, refunds, delivery issues, cancellations, and damaged products.

Important: This is not an official Amazon policy document. It is a simplified, paraphrased knowledge base created only for learning, prototyping, and AI agent demonstration. It should not be used for real customer decisions.

1. Purpose of This Knowledge Base

- Help the AI support agent answer customer queries using a policy-backed response instead of a generic chatbot reply.
- Support common e-commerce cases such as delivery delay, delivered-but-not-received, missing item, cancellation, return, refund delay, damaged item, billing issue, and general complaint.
- Guide the agent to identify urgency, missing information, escalation need, and a customer-safe response draft.
- Keep responses polite, factual, and limited to the information available in order data and policy sections.

2. General Agent Safety Rules

- Do not ask for sensitive details such as OTP, CVV, full card number, account password, or banking password.
- Do not promise refunds, replacements, compensation, delivery dates, or cancellation unless policy and order status support it.
- If policy is unclear, advise verification by a human support agent.
- If the customer is angry, distressed, or repeatedly complaining, acknowledge the concern first and then move to resolution steps.
- For fraud, account misuse, payment dispute, or legal questions, escalate to a specialist team.

3. Supported Issue Categories

4. Account, Service Use, and Payment Safety

- Some services may require the customer to be logged into an account and to have a valid payment method available.
- The customer is responsible for keeping account credentials confidential.
- Customer support should verify identity using approved non-sensitive information only.

Policy guidance

- For account access issues, guide the customer to official account recovery or customer service channels.
- For payment method problems, ask for non-sensitive details such as order ID, payment date, and transaction reference if available.
- Do not request OTP, CVV, full card number, password, or net banking credentials.

Escalation triggers

- Account takeover suspicion, unauthorized transaction, payment fraud, or identity mismatch.
- Customer asks for legal interpretation of conditions of use or seller terms.

5. Pricing, Product Information, and Availability

- Product availability, price, offer eligibility, and shipping timeline can change based on inventory, location, seller, and order status.
- If a customer questions price difference or offer eligibility, the agent should verify the order record and avoid making unsupported promises.

Policy guidance

- If price changed after purchase, do not automatically promise a refund of the difference unless the official policy supports it.
- If the customer reports incorrect product information, collect product link or order ID and escalate for catalogue review if required.

Agent response rules

- Use neutral wording: "I can help check the order details and available support options."
- Do not say that the company will honor a previous price unless confirmed by policy or supervisor approval.

6. Delivery Delay Policy

- Use this section when the customer says the order is late, delayed, not arrived, or still in transit.
- Check order status, expected delivery date, tracking updates, and whether the order is already marked delivered.

Policy guidance

- If tracking still shows in transit and the promised delivery date recently passed, apologize and provide the latest available tracking information.
- If no tracking update is available for more than 48 hours, mark the case for logistics review.
- If the order is marked delivered but customer denies receiving it, switch to the Delivered But Not Received policy.

Escalation triggers

- Delivery is delayed by more than 3 days and no updated tracking is available.
- Premium or business customer with repeated late shipment experience.

- Customer reports an urgent need due to medical, business, or event dependency.

7. Delivered But Not Received Policy

- Use this section when tracking says delivered but the customer says the package was not received.
- This case should normally be treated as high urgency because it may require courier verification.

Policy guidance

- Ask the customer to confirm the delivery address on the order.
- Ask the customer to check with family members, neighbors, reception, security desk, mail room, or building office.
- Ask the customer to check for delivery updates or proof of delivery, if available.
- If the issue is reported within the allowed reporting window, raise logistics verification.
- For the Amazon.in help topic found during research, the result snippet says delivered-not-received issues should be reported within 7 days from the date of delivery marking.

Agent response rules

- Do not immediately promise refund or replacement.
- Use empathetic wording because the customer may feel worried or frustrated.
- Collect only useful details: confirmed address, alternate contact number, safe place checked, and whether building security was checked.

Escalation triggers

- Customer says order is delivered but not received.
- Customer reports high-value item missing.
- Customer says multiple packages are missing or repeated delivery failures occurred.

8. Missing Item From Order Policy

- Use this section when the package arrived but one or more items are missing.
- Some orders may be split into multiple shipments with different delivery dates.

Policy guidance

- Ask the customer to check whether the missing item is part of another shipment.
- Ask the customer to check the order details and package tracking for each item.
- If all shipments show delivered but an item is still missing, escalate for package and shipment verification.

Escalation triggers

- Order contains high-value item missing from package.
- Customer received an empty package or wrong package.
- Multiple items missing or package appears tampered with.

9. Cancellation Policy

- Use this section when the customer wants to cancel an order.
- Cancellation availability depends on order status and whether the order has shipped or entered fulfillment.

Policy guidance

- If the order has not shipped, guide the customer to cancel the item from the order page or process cancellation if the system allows it.
- If the order has already shipped, cancellation may not be possible.
- For shipped or delivered items, guide the customer toward refusal of delivery where available or the return process after delivery.
- Do not confirm cancellation until order status confirms the cancellation request was accepted.

Escalation triggers

- Cancellation option is unavailable but customer reports wrong order, wrong address, or urgent issue.
- Customer claims cancellation was requested earlier but order still shipped.

10. Returns and Replacement Policy

- Use this section when the customer wants to return, replace, or exchange an item.
- Return eligibility depends on product category, seller, return window, item condition, and whether the item is explicitly non-returnable.

Policy guidance

- Most items purchased from sellers listed on the marketplace are returnable within the applicable return window, except items explicitly identified as non-returnable.
- For damaged, defective, or wrong item delivered, a full refund or replacement may be available as applicable after verification.
- Ask for photos, videos, packaging condition, delivery date, and product condition when relevant.
- If a replacement is not available, guide toward refund or human review based on policy.

Agent response rules

- Avoid saying every product is returnable. Always use language such as "depending on eligibility".
- Do not approve replacement without basic verification or policy support.

Escalation triggers

- High-value product, damaged product, wrong product, missing parts, repeated return attempts, or non-returnable item exception request.

11. Refund Policy

- Use this section when the customer asks about refund status, refund delay, refund method, or refund amount.
- Refund timing and method depend on payment mode, return pickup, quality check, seller processing, and bank processing time.

Policy guidance

- For prepaid orders, refund is generally issued to the original payment method.

- For Pay on Delivery or similar cases, refund may be routed to bank account or account wallet/balance depending on available options.
- A refund is normally initiated after the returned package is received or pickup is successfully completed, depending on policy flow.
- The Amazon.in refund timeline search result found during research says refund requests are processed within 13 days of successful pickup.
- If refund is outside the stated timeline, escalate to the payments team.

Agent response rules

- Ask for order ID, return pickup date, and refund reference if available.
- Do not ask for full card number, CVV, OTP, banking password, or confidential payment credentials.

Escalation triggers

- Refund pending beyond expected timeline.
- Duplicate charge, payment deducted but order not confirmed, failed refund, or customer reports unauthorized payment.

12. Damaged, Defective, or Wrong Item Policy

- Use this section when the item is damaged, defective, broken, not working, missing parts, or different from what was ordered.
- The agent should separate shipping damage, product defect, wrong item, and missing accessory cases where possible.

Policy guidance

- Request clear photos or videos showing the issue when needed.
- Ask for delivery date, product condition, packaging condition, and whether the item was used or arrived damaged.
- If eligible, offer return, replacement, repair, or refund guidance according to the applicable rule.
- For damaged, defective, or wrong item cases, refund or replacement may be available after verification.

Escalation triggers

- High-value product, safety issue, battery or electronic hazard, wrong product delivered, missing serial number, repeated damage report, or customer asks for immediate refund without verification.

13. Billing and Payment Issue Policy

- Use this section for duplicate charges, payment deducted but order not placed, failed payment, refund not visible, or invoice issue.
- Billing issues should be handled carefully because customers may share sensitive financial concerns.

Policy guidance

- Ask for order ID, payment date, payment mode, and non-sensitive transaction reference if available.
- If the customer says they were charged twice, mark urgency as high and escalate to payments verification.
- If payment was deducted but order was not confirmed, escalate to payment support and advise the customer not to attempt repeated payments until status is checked.
- Never ask for OTP, CVV, full card number, UPI PIN, card PIN, banking password, or complete bank credentials.

Escalation triggers

- Duplicate charge, unauthorized charge, payment deducted without order confirmation, failed refund, or customer reports fraud.

14. Warranty and Product Support Policy

- Use this section when the customer says the product stopped working after delivery or within warranty period.
- Warranty support depends on product category, invoice, purchase date, serial number, seller/manufacturer terms, and physical damage conditions.

Policy guidance

- Ask for invoice, product serial number, issue description, and date when the problem started.
- Guide the customer to product support, troubleshooting, repair, replacement, service center, or manufacturer support where eligible.
- Physical damage may not be covered unless an accidental damage plan or specific coverage exists.

Escalation triggers

- Unclear warranty eligibility, expensive electronics, safety issue, repeated defect, or customer disputes warranty denial.

15. Response Tone and Customer Experience Rules

- Start with acknowledgement: "I am sorry for the inconvenience" or "I understand why this is frustrating."
- Use simple language and avoid legalistic wording unless the customer asks for terms or policy details.
- Explain the next step clearly: check tracking, collect details, raise logistics review, start return, verify refund, or escalate.
- End with a specific request or action, not a vague statement.

Policy guidance

- For angry customers, avoid blame and do not argue about policy.
- For missing package, damaged item, duplicate charge, or refund delay, show urgency and ownership.
- For unclear cases, ask only the minimum information needed to move forward.
